London Calling Senior Rusat Ramgopal

Since Student Body President Rusat Ramgopal (pictured at left) has been interested in law and politics for as long as he can remember, enrolling at a school to pursue these fields was a priority in his college process. He considered studying in England, at the University of London in particular, because it is where his uncles as well as Mahatma Gandhi and Nelson Mandela attended.

Although he considered other options, including the University of Toronto and NYU, when Rusat was accepted in January at the highly ranked King’s College, University of London’s law school, he decided to go across the pond. This enables him to qualify as a lawyer four years earlier than he would studying in the U.S. or Canada. He explains, “While American and Canadian law schools require you to have a first degree/bachelor’s before you attend law school, there is no such requirement in the UK. Because New York State accepts the British law degree, I can finish law school and take the bar at 21 instead of at 25, and achieve my career goals earlier.” These goals include practicing law and “eventually running for office.”

While Rusat is the only member of the class of 2018 to enroll abroad, his classmates will be spread across the U.S. in Arizona, California, Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Vermont. About two thirds of the class will be staying in New York State.
